THE "OWL" CARS STOP.

The Washington and Georgetown Company Suspend the All-Night Service.

The "owl" or all-night cars on the Washington and Georgetown road stopped running Monday night and the service has not been since restored. The stopping of these cars without notice left a good many people who depended upon them in the lurch and there has been considerable complaint in consequence The cars were stopped, it is stated at the railroad office, on account of the beginning of the work of reconstruction on the road made nec-essary by the introduction of the cable system. When President Hurt of the Washington and Georgetown railroad was asked this morning by a Star reporter why the company took the "owl" cars off the road he said very decidedly: "Simply because it is a physical impossibility to construct the cable road and run these cars to construct the cable road and run these cars at the same time. As to no notice being given the public that we intended doing so, I can only say that the necessity of the discontinuance of these all-night cars came upon us rather suddenly, and as such things soon advertise themselves we did not think it necessary to doe so. To the best of my knowledge the public were not notified when we put them on. Instead of running the cars all night we will start them a half hour earlier in the morning and keep them out a half hour later at night. As most of the late travel is carried between 12 and 1230 the majority of the people will be accommodated. After this hour the travel never did pay us."

When asked whether the company would again put on the "night-liners" after the con-

when asset whether the company would again put on the "night-liners" after the con-struction of the cable road Mr. Hurt said: "No; the company has found that it does not pay, as the travel after the hour I have just named is generally too small and can be accommodated in other ways."

MR. CLEVELAND AND THE SOUTH. al Pretty Weddings-Personal Notes of How the Alliance Movement May Affect the Democratic Situation Next Year. Trinity Church was well filled this morning There appears to be an opposition to Mr. Cleveland developing in the south which, if it does not force the east to support him, is liable to prove a serious thing to the democratic party at the next presidential election. Talks a STAR reporter has had with a num-> friendly and some unfriendly to the ex-President, indicate a pretty general agreement that there is a determined hostile movement on foot, though men hold different opinions as to its potency. The movement does not appear to originate in any personal objection to Mr. Cleveland, but has for its primary object the overthrow of eastern influence in the party. The principal demonstrations are being made in those sections where the Farmers' Alliance is strongest, and his letter on the subject of silver is made the excuse for assault. Some of The Star's informants say that in nearly every case the character of the state delegation sent to the rational description. every case the character of the state delega-tion sent to the national democratic conven-tion in '92 will depend on the strength or weakness of the alliance in that state. Where-ever the alliance holds the power an anti-Cleveland delegation will be chosen. In South Carolina, where they have an alliance governor, they will be almost certain to send an anti-Cleveland delegation. In some other states there will be a hard fight from now until the primaries are held with results not easily primaries are held, with results not easily guessed at this time.

THE PEOPLE AND THE POLITICIANS. Many of the southern politicians in Congress have always been hostile to Mr. Cleveland, but through motives of fear might be a serious through motives of fear might be a serious thing for Mr. Cleveland; but as things are there is a paradox in the situation. Some of the longest headed men in the party believe that this opposition—and there is a question as to the extent of its influence upon the controlling element in any one state—will prove a great source of strength to Mr. Cleveland in the end. To them it seems as if the third party move-ment would make almost certain his nomination. The motive of the truly democratic op-position to him in the south is to keep the alliparty—a thing which they are not apt to do in great numbers anyhow. But this motive can have no force offside of the south when it is apparent that nothing is to be gained by placating the alliance of the west. If here were no third party movement the democrats might hope to make some gains in the west by taking advantage of the clamor there against the tariff system and nominating a western candidate. But the third party is gowestern candidate. But the third party is going to be there to take the votes of the discontented farmers and the democrats would stand a very poor show of getting enough of them to count even if they nominated a free-coinage alliance man at the head of the ticket. The democrats could certainly hope for nothing from the eastern and middle states if they nominated a candidate who would be acceptable to the southern Farmers' Alliance; the third party would take the alliance vote of the west and there would be nothing but the south from the eastern and middle states if they nominated a candidate who would be acceptable to the southern Farmers Alliance; the

The presence of the third party therefore makes it important for the democrats to hold nominate a suitable candidate. The republicans are apt to lose something to the third party in the west, and it is beheved that the democrats can better afford to lose something to the same band of financial reformers in the south than they can to sacrifice the east for something they can be something they can be something they can be something they can be said to restrict the same thing they can be said to restrict the same thing they can be said to restrict the sai and monimate a suitable candidate. The repulsic.

Incare are apt to lose something to the third party in the west, and it is believed that the something to the sample they cannot set, by matter what to be sent to secrifice the east for something they cannot set, by matter what they do.

There appears to be very little chance, however, of the third party's getting any considerable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as a long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or siderable number of votes in the south as long or the large buildings, where it is important or the list street side is in a very dilapidated condition and sadly in need of repairs. Subsequently the Secretary of the Treasury telephoned for information as to when the work would be commenced, and he was informed that the work had been aban-doned in view of the attorney's decision, a copy of which was sent to him upon application. Fearing that the application of the attor-ney's opinion in this particular case was some-what vague, Capt. Rossell submitted the case mey's opinion in this particular case was somewhat vague, Capt. Rossell submitted the case of the Treasury Department pavement for his opinion. The attorney in his opinion, which was submitted several days ago, advises that the Commissioners address a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury with an offer to cause the work to be done provided the Treasury Department has the money available to pay for the same, as he understands the law to mean that the Commissioners have no authority to do this work and pay for it out-of the current revenues raised by taxation, as the Treasury Department and the flagstones have been worn out and broken in the transaction of business in which the government has had already an exciusive interest, and the entire property is exempt from taxation under the authorities of the District of Columbia.

This is a very important decision and one that will save the District agreat deal of money, for upper its terms the District is not obliged either to pave or repair any sidewalks in front of public reservations belonging to the United States.

THAT POLICEMAN DECISION. Acting First Controller Garrison Thinks a Conference Will Be Held. Judge Matthews, the first controller of the treasury, is in Illinois and in his absence Mr.

Garrison, the acting controller, does not care to discuss the probabilities in the case of the recent decision of the District Supreme Court to the effect that policemen can be employed ber of the well-informed southern men, some in the District without reference to their army the Navy Department: or navy records. The matter has not yet been brought to the attention of the controller's office, but it is generally expected that when that bureau is called on for an opinion it will The Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. Marine Band ought to be increased to at least cighty-five men, and then paid large enough salaries to make it an object for first-class musicians to enlist. We had an excellent opportunity to observe this matter of government bands while the squadron was in Europe and the comparison reflected little enough credit on the United States. Every man-of-war of any size has a band, large in proportion to her complement of men. An American squadron of twenty vessels would have a band of sixteen pieces. You have no idea of the value that a band is on board ship. Why, on the Chicago it is one of my most efficient means of maintaining discipline. Nearly every evening in summer I send the band forward and have it play all sorts of music for the men, and sometimes there will be as many as a hundred jackies dancing on the deek at once. The music enlivers them, cheers them up, changes

Why Admiral Walker Thinks the Marine Band Should Be Increased.

Acting Rear Admiral John G. Walker, the commander of the squadron of evolution, is a firm believer in music as a factor in naval discipline and a strong advocate of the proposition to fincrease the size of the Marine Band. He said to a Stab reporter this morning: "We are very mean about our national music on this side of the Atlantic. The morning of the attack was perfectly clear, the light in the light house hauling to be done. If there is a big pull to be made we get the men along the line, start up the band and give the word, and the way the rope is pulled would make you stare. When we cast the anchor—which is one of the worst jobs of hauling on board ship—we nearly always station the band in the bows and play a lively march, and the lump of iron comes shooting up to the rail in no time. There ought to ing up to the rail in no time. There ought to be more music in the world, and particularly in the navy, where the men lead hard, unindred and fifty men, including all the engineers. Some time was spent in maneuver-ing to get a position off the quarter or astern, where the gun mounted in the bow of the Aconcagua could not reach them, when the Warspite Admiral Walker was at the Navy Department today hurrying up the bureau chiefs whose men are at work on his ships at the Norfolk navy yard.
